

Achieving Zero-Trust in Partnership with Palo Alto Networks

As more federal agencies contemplate the adoption of a zero-trust approach, consideration must be given to the right partners and the right tools. Palo Alto Networks (Palo Alto), and Presidio Federal work to enable the implementation of zero-trust across users, applications, and infrastructure. This includes tying strong identity to integrity of devices and workloads, applying least privilege access, and continuously validating all transactions with comprehensive threat protection.

Palo Alto's tools help agencies address cyber security threats and the need for robust and reliable digital government operations. Federal agencies benefit from the improved performance, increase in mission productivity, and streamlined compliance and cyber security offered by Palo Alto's network, cloud, and workstation platforms.

Together, Presidio Federal and Palo Alto offer a variety of secure and seamless solutions that empower achieving zero-trust in the federal industry. From modernization, improving security, and managing digital workplace for remote employees – we've got you covered.

Palo Alto's solutions help federal agencies achieve a zero-trust enterprise by being:

Comprehensive

Zero-trust should never focus on a narrow technology. Instead, it should consider the full ecosystem of controls – network, endpoint, cloud, application, IoT, identity and more – that many organizations rely on for protection.

Actionable

To get a headstart on implementing zero-trust, consider what current set of controls can be immediately leveraged. Once your zero-trust foundation is established, we'll help you move to the next step.

Intelligent

Zero-trust is not a service, it's a concept—and a simple one at that: trust nothing. Zero-trust can be easily conveyed to non-technical executives by saying: Trust nothing, validate everything. Always.

Scalable

Our framework and partnership will provide your agency with a more secure and valuable investment, that will be a resource for your entire zero-trust journey.
